Adelaide Airport Limited announces new Director

Adelaide Airport Limited (AAL) has announced the appointment of Andrew Parker as a new Board Director.

Mr Parker was most recently Chief Sustainability Officer for Qantas Airways overseeing sustainability, ESG and climate change strategies as a member of the Group's leadership team.

His previous roles have included global roles for Emirates Airlines based in Dubai and as a long-term member of the Qantas Executive Team.

AAL Chair, Rob Chapman, said Mr Parker would be a valuable addition to the Board drawing upon over two decades of aviation industry experience.

"Mr Parker understands both the national and global aviation landscape, and will offer an extraordinary depth of knowledge, particularly in the area of sustainability," Mr Chapman said.

"Mr Parker's customer-led insights gained from decades within the leadership teams of two of Adelaide Airport's largest airline customers, will be invaluable."

"His appointment comes at a time when aviation industry sustainability is more important than ever. Mr Parker's experience will continue to drive Adelaide Airport as a sustainability leader as well as continue AAL's collaboration with airlines to develop commercial low-carbon sustainable aviation fuel."

Mr Parker's appointment follows the sad passing of long standing AAL Board member John Ward in August last year.
